

Researchers'
Choice
Communication
Award 2018

Researchers' Choice Communication Award

Nominate your peers now

Do you know an early career researcher who goes the extra mile to communicate their scientific ideas to the public?

“Communicating science is not only rewarding and challenging, but it’s also vital to the future of science. There are so many amazing and selfless science communicators, who will be further encouraged and motivated to keep engaging with the public...nominate them for the Researchers’ Choice Communication Award.”

- Matthew Allen (Winner RCCA 2015)

Nominations deadline extended to Friday 29th June 2018

Nominate your peers for #RCCA2018 directly on the social network platform Mendeley.

The nominee must:

- Be living in the UK
- Be affiliated to UK university
- Not have published before 2015
- You cannot nominate yourself

For more information, please contact us at ecrawards@kaizo.co.uk

#RCCA2018

‘Science is not finished until it’s communicated’

Sir Mark Walport, former UK Chief Scientist

Early Career Researchers are the future of science, helping to advance research and put science at the forefront of the public mind. Elsevier supports researchers at every step in their career. From recognizing and rewarding outstanding researchers and their institutions through numerous programs and resources, to supporting them with free e-learning tools such as Elsevier’s Researcher Academy.

Alongside producing life-changing research, excellent science communication skills are important and capture the imagination, sparking meaningful debate and discussion that can grant science a broader vision in our society. That’s why Elsevier is calling on you to nominate your peers, who excel at this, for the Researchers’ Choice Communication Award.

Elsevier’s Researchers’ Choice Communication Award rewards outstanding skills in communicating research. It recognizes a researcher who has helped to bridge the gap between academics and the general public, ensuring that science is a priority on the public agenda.

Nominations deadline extended to Friday 29th June 2018

Publish the following information on the RCCA 2018 Mendeley group:

- Name
- Age
- Institution
- Summary of nomination
- Links to evidence of good work
- You cannot nominate yourself

A panel of judges will review a shortlist of candidates, and the winner will be revealed at our awards ceremony, on Thursday 4th October 2018 in London, at the Royal Society in the presence of senior research leaders.

For more information, please contact us at ecawards@kaizo.co.uk