Viewpoints

Viewpoints are reflections on current issues and themes identified by the editorial team. The style here is more scholarly and formal than a blog post, but less rigorous than a regular journal article. The idea is to respond in a timely way to current issues using the methods and insights from the subdiscipline. Viewpoints on a particular theme may be published in different issues of the journal, but they will be compiled online, along with an editorial introduction, as a Virtual Forum. Viewpoints that are accepted for publication will be made available online as a pre-proof article-in-press to help facilitate discussion earlier in the publishing process. Individual Viewpoints are 1500-2000 words in length, including references (endnotes are discouraged). While not peer-reviewed, commentaries are reviewed by the Setting the Agenda editor and possibly other members of the editorial team. Questions and expressions of interest can be directed to the Setting the Agenda editor, Caroline Nagel: cnagel@mailbox.sc.edu.
